Detailed Itinerary Information

Day 1 Botanical Garden

On our first day we are visiting the Botanic Gardens. It was founded at its present site in 1859 by the Agri-horticultural Society. It played a pivotal role in the region's rubber trade boom in the early twentieth century when its first scientific director, Henry Nicholas Ridley, headed research into the plant's cultivation.

Day 2 Marina Bay

On our day 2 we are visiting to the Marina Bay. In 1969, land reclamation work to create 360 hectares of prime waterfront site began at Marina Bay. The reclaimed land forms what is today the Marina Centre and Marina South areas, and the reclamation work was completed in 1992.

Day 3 Interesting Neighbourhood

We are visiting the neighbourhood on our third day. Singapore's indigenous culture originates primarily from the Austronesian people that arrived from the island of Taiwan, settling between 1500 and 1000 BCE. It was then influenced during the Middle Ages primarily by multiple Chinese dynasties

Day 4 Town Market

In his 1822 Master Town Plan, Sir Stamford Raffles allocated the whole area west of the Singapore River for a Chinese settlement known as the Chinese Campong, envisaging that Chinese would form the bulk of future town dwellers. Singapore, the new land of opportunity then, had attracted many Chinese immigrants, who expanded the original boundaries of this economically and culturally vibrant, self-contained town.

Day 5 Fort Canning Park

The fort was completed in 1861 and renamed Fort Canning, with the hill known as Fort Canning Hill. Also built within the fort were barracks for the European and Indian soldiers, as well as a hospital and gunpowder magazines. Most of the fortress was demolished in 1926 when the service reservoir was constructed. It is also a popular location for exhibitions, concerts and outdoor recreation.

Day 6 Sentosa Island

Sentosa was known for savage pirates and a brutal prisoner of war camp before the Singapore government converted it into an upmarket vacation destination in the 1970s. Now 10 million people a year visit this island, which is less than a mile from the mainland and connected by rail and cable car.
